CAREER

Anton Källberg, born on 17 August 1997 in Sollentuna, Sweden, rose through the national development system to become one of Sweden's leading singles players. He joined Borussia Düsseldorf in 2016 and has since played a key role in the club's domestic and European successes, including multiple Bundesliga and Champions League titles.

He has represented Sweden at two Olympic Games, contributing to the team's silver medal at Paris 2024. In 2025, Källberg remained an active figure on the international circuit, competing at the World Championships in Doha and delivering strong performances at WTT Champions events – including a runner-up finish in Frankfurt – confirming his presence among Europe's top contenders.

LEGACY AND FUTURE GOALS

As of December 2025, Anton Källberg is firmly established as part of Sweden's modern generation helping to drive the national team's resurgence – including the Olympic team silver in Paris and recent European team success. At club level, he remains a key figure at Borussia Düsseldorf, contributing to sustained domestic and Champions League competitiveness.

Looking ahead, Källberg aims to climb further in the world singles rankings, achieve deeper runs in WTT Champions and World Championship events, and help Sweden remain a podium threat in major team competitions. His consistent presence on the international circuit positions him well to secure more top-level singles results in the coming seasons.
